Horrible Tragedy at the London Post-Office.

In a book published in Berlin, under the title of "Schultze and Muller in London," is the following passage:—At a quarter to 6 we went to the great post office. The squeeze was tremendous round the newspaper box, where the newspapers are thrust in bales; and it is, indeed, on a grand scale, since the Times alone has 16,000,000 subscribers. I warned Schultze not to go so near the crush, but he did not hear me. As he was standing there there came a great shock of newspapers boys running with bales of newspaper and throwing them in at the window. A bale of newspapers hit Schultze on the head; he loses his balance and tips forward into the bureau; some officials immediately seize him, stamp him in the stomach, and the unhappy Schultze is despatched in an unpaid newpacked to the provinces. At this moment the box is closed with a snap. I rush against it and cry, 'Schultze! Schultze!' But it is too late. Your unhappy son-in-law was already packed in the post-card. I ran into the bureau of the post-master, and demanded back your son-in-law. 'Is your friend addressed,' he asked.—'No,' I answered.—'Very well,' says the Englishman, 'M. Schultze will remain for six months in the bureau, and if no one applies for him, he will be buried as a dead letter.'

"Now," they said to her, "you can go in and see him; but remember that he is very sick with heart disease, and don't say a word that will trouble him." Then she walked in, sat down on the edge of a chair, and remarked cheerfully, as she shook her head: "Ah—ah! m!—sad, ain't it! Thought I'd jest run in, 'cause they said there wuz no knowin' how soon you might drop off."

Why do elderly spinsters have a predilection for parrots? Well, they have no man about the house, and they want something around that can swear.—Boston Post.
